Leon Trotsky – On the Militant and his Discussions and Reflections – is the Militant Correct?

By Leon Trotsky (1918 – 1927, Writings and Reflections)

I. A Militant

These years we have failed, the revolution is now tragic. I give speeches on its success. I mean to be successful. My future looks vague and worse, till Communism might succeed. I mean a militant is correct, when he is optimistic. I also mean militant fashion and style, or fashioning of oneself into a revolt professionale is then the correct way of living. Hegel is a good habit. But I mean is not Phenomenology des Geistes also more clear and distinct in a militant.

II. How can I prove it? By My Life.

Nowadays I am ill. But I am also fine, and I have been a revolutionary.

III. Added Note 2025 – Just now by Leon Trotsky

I mean a militant is efficient when he has conceptualism and style in even say a Spanish argument on offer – in the conceptualism level a “free militant exercise here above” which has a living example as a militant in retroactive speech.

I mean one should be that efficient and brilliant. I argue it has to be really like speech efficacy.

I also mean then we will be a steel. In literary manners Sirohi proves that heroism is successful.

Part II Writings and Reflections in 1918 – 1927

I. Meanings and Philologies on the Militant

In philology, the militant is a Prophet also Prophet Armed and in fact like a clear cut speaker and mannerist.

II. Reflections

I reflect that in fact a person is a normal person as such, the militant is just a bit better.